

I am against changing the Broadcast Ownership rules. If this happens, the quality and choices of what we have to watch, read and listen to will change drastically. This is already apparent with radio stations across the country being owned by only a few. As shown by PBS's "Now With Bill Moyers", all of the radio stations in Minot, ND are owned by Clear Channel and all broadcast national syndicated programs. When the town had a serious public emergency, there was no one at any station to make public announcements via radio to make people aware of what was going on. This is a frightening reality that will only get worse by opening the floodgates of broadcast ownership.

Sincerely,
Jodi Stock
